European Beef Products Banned

Effective immediately Department of Defense medical authorities have suspended the procurement and sale of any European-sourced beef, lamb or veal until the potential threat of mad cow disease can be evaluated. On March 8 the Army Surgeon General issued regulations to military agencies that procure meat products to bring policies in line with federal guidelines. This action will likely generate some sporadic outages of beef products at AAFES food facilities for a short time.

The greatest impact will be in Burger King restaurants which will continue normal operations, but without offering any beef products. Pork, poultry and fish products are not affected by this ban and will be available as normal. Doner Kebab concessions will continue on-post operations if they switch to products containing only pork. All other AAFES operations utilize meat from approved sources and will not be impacted. Anthony's Pizza, Robin Hood, Taco Bell, Popeye's and Subway will continue with business as usual. AAFES is working to accelerate procurement and delivery of U.S. produced meat products to area retail outlets. Troop dining facilities and commissaries are also not affected as they use only U.S. produced meat products.
